PRESS RELEASE

The latest edition of the Australasian Catholic Record (January 2021) is now available and is a special edition with several articles dealing with aspects of COVID-19.

Well known historian Jeff Kildea compares the two pandemics, the Spanish flu and COVID-19. Daniel Fleming and Philippa McIlroy reflect on the ethical questions that arise as a consequence of the pandemic, and the secretary general of the Australian Medical Association, Martin Laverty, explains some of the challenges that relate to charity and the coronavirus economy.

Joseph Lam asks the question: Can anything good come out of Rome? and provides a critique of the Instruction on the Pastoral Conversion of the Parish Community in the context of the forthcoming Plenary Council in Australia

The Australasian Catholic Record, now in its 98th volume, is a quarterly journal of scholarly peer reviewed articles touching on aspects of Catholic theology, philosophy, and church history.

It is available by subscription for $85. Single issues are available for $25.
