

Catholic School Parents Australia Advocates for Sustainable Solutions for Remote Indigenous Boarding Funding

Catholic School Parents Australia is calling for immediate action to address the critical need for sustainable funding solutions for remote Indigenous boarding students. Our organization recognizes the unique challenges faced by these students and their families, and we believe it is essential to provide them with the necessary support to ensure their educational success.

The current funding arrangements for remote Indigenous boarding students are inadequate and unsustainable. Many students from remote communities rely on boarding schools to access quality education, but the financial burden on families and schools is significant. This situation undermines the students' opportunities for academic and personal growth and does little to close the gap.

Catholic School Parents Australia urges the government to collaborate with educational institutions, Indigenous communities, and other stakeholders to develop a long-term funding strategy that addresses the specific needs of remote Indigenous boarding students. A sustainable solution must include adequate financial support for families, appropriate resources for schools, and culturally sensitive programs that respect and celebrate Indigenous heritage.

We believe and the government says that every child deserves the opportunity to thrive in their educational journey, regardless of their geographical location. By investing in sustainable funding solutions for remote Indigenous boarding students, we can help bridge the gap in educational outcomes and create a brighter future for all Australians.

Catholic School Parents Australia is committed to advocating for equitable and inclusive education for all students. We stand with remote Indigenous communities in their pursuit of quality education and urge the government to prioritize this important issue.

Media contacts

Siobhan Allen

0409 025 683

Or

Carmel Nash

0421633915